COMMUNITY IMPACT

Sands Bethlehem donated approximately four (4) acres to ArtsQuest in the Fall of 2009 to build the SteelStacks Campus

The Campus, which opened in the Spring of 2012, includes

- Performing Arts Center:

- 450-seat, cabaret-style Musikfest Café featuring a wide variety of music performances
- 4,000-square-foot Blast Furnace Room used for community functions and education
- Two-screen art cinema that presents independent, foreign, and documentary films

- Music Pavilion:

- The Levitt Pavilion presents a minimum of 50 free concerts a year for the community to enjoy

PBS 39 at SteelStacks

Sands Bethlehem donated over one (1) acre of land to PBS 39 in 2010 for the development of the SteelStacks Public Broadcast Center on the Western end of the former Bethlehem Steel site.

- Opened in the Summer of 2012
- Features two (2) new television studios that are adjacent to the Performing Arts Center developed by ArtsQuest
- The 29,000 square foot Public Broadcast Center anchors the Lehigh Valley's 21st Century Town Square where broadcasting, performing arts, education and the community intersect with technology, education and celebration

City of Bethlehem Visitors' Center

Sands Bethlehem donated approximately two and one-half (2-½) acres in June 2011 containing the Industrial Stock House, one of the first buildings built on the Bethlehem Steel property in 1863, to be adaptively reused as the City of Bethlehem's Visitors' Center. It was developed by the Bethlehem Redevelopment Authority (RDA), opened in May 2013, and is operated by the Lehigh Valley Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Renovation of the Hoover Mason Trestle

- Sands Bethlehem entered into an Easement Agreement with the Redevelopment Authority of Bethlehem (RDA) in September 2013
- A permanent easement was granted to the RDA by Sands Bethlehem at no cost covering the area of the trestle and planned access improvements to preserve the trestle and create a public area and walkway
- The RDA invested approximately $14M on the project

Steelworkers' Archives

- Sands Bethlehem provides space within the casino building for the Steelworker's Archives (SA)
 - Relocated to The Outlets at Sands Bethlehem in 2016 to be more accessible to the general public
